AIRCRAFT MANAGEMENT

PEACE OF MIND

Owning and operating an aircraft can be complicated and time-consuming, taking the efficiencies out of aircraft ownership. Priester Aviation offers customizable programs to simplify the ownership experience, whether you're an individual owner or a business with one or more private jets.

FULL MANAGEMENT

For those who seek a worry-free approach to aircraft ownership, we offer our Full Management service. We provide round-the-clock monitoring of every aspect that concerns your aircraft, including administration, trip coordination, crew scheduling, flight operations, regulatory oversight, risk management, and maintenance coordination. For those who wish to offset the cost of owning their aircraft via marketing it to charter clients, this management option can also include the required FAA Part 135 charter certification and oversight.

CHARTER MANAGEMENT

For aircraft owners who already have flight departments or administrative staff that manage their aircraft, Priester's Charter Management services offer excellent options. This includes some of the options included with Full Management, including adding your aircraft to our FAA Part 135 worldwide charter certification so we can help you generate revenue when you are not flying.

FLIGHT DEPARTMENT SOLUTIONS

Priester also offers Part 91 flight support services. By leveraging our expertise and purchasing power, flight departments can create a customized service plan to improve the efficiency of their flight operations. This program is designed to complement an existing flight department.

HISTORY

COMMITTED EXCELLENCE SINCE 1945

Priester Aviation was founded by George Priester in 1945 as a flight training school that eventually evolved into the private aviation services company that it is today. It was a simple proposition at first, to provide a platform to educate and demonstrate the practices of a progressing industry that would eventually integrate itself into the lives of on-the-go business and leisure travelers alike. As the aviation community developed and businesses began to expand globally, the need for point-to-point travel became a necessity and alternatives to commercial airline service were imperative. Priester's goal was to provide executives and other discerning travelers with premium private aviation services individually tailored to fit their needs.

Today, Priester Aviation is one of the leading private aviation companies that continues to invest in the future to elevate an already special client experience.
